Anorectal manometry involves passing a very narrow tube into the anal canal. This procedure measures pressures throughout the rectum and anal canal to determine how well the muscles in this area function. During the procedure you will be asked to squeeze your anal muscles, push, and indicate when you feel balloon inflation. This is a very easily tolerated procedure with only perhaps a sensation of fullness in the rectum. The procedure takes 20 minutes to perform. You will be able to work or go home immediately after the procedure.
